THE EXPERIENCE

Where Colors Paint the Mountains of Palccoyo

ENGLISH

Not all rainbow mountains are created equal. Palccoyo is the Andes' best-kept secret — three stunning colored peaks rising from the Vilcanota highlands, accessible on a gentle 3km trail that keeps the crowds away and the experience intimate.

Begin the journey with a stop at Checacupe, home to three historic bridges spanning the Inca, colonial, and republican eras. Then, ascend into the high plateau where alpaca herds roam freely and the air feels thin and electric.

From the viewpoint at 4,900m, the sacred Ausangate glacier lords over the horizon while Palccoyo's layered mineral hues unfold like a painter's palette. The Rock Forest adds a dramatic final chapter before you descend for lunch and the journey home.

ESPAÑOL

No todas las montañas de colores son iguales. Palccoyo es el secreto mejor guardado de los Andes — tres cumbres de colores que se elevan desde el altiplano del Vilcanota, accesibles por un sendero de 3km que mantiene la tranquilidad y la experiencia íntima.

El viaje comienza en Checacupe, hogar de tres puentes históricos que abarcan las eras inca, colonial y republicana. Luego, asciende al altiplano donde manadas de alpacas deambulan libremente.

Desde el mirador a 4,900m, el glaciar sagrado del Ausangate domina el horizonte mientras los colores de Palccoyo se despliegan como una paleta de pintor. El Bosque de Piedras añade el capítulo final antes de regresar al Cusco.

ENGLISH — A Day of Colors, Silence & Open Sky

Your adventure begins with an early hotel pickup and a scenic drive southeast through the Andean highlands. The first stop is Checacupe, where three bridges — Inca, colonial, and republican — stand side by side as a living timeline of Peruvian history.

From there, the road climbs into the high plateau where the landscape transforms into vast golden grassland and rust-colored ridges. At Palccoyo Village, your trek begins on a gentle, well-marked trail. In about 50 minutes of easy walking, THREE separate rainbow mountains come into view simultaneously — a privilege few visitors ever experience.

At 4,900 meters, the sacred Ausangate snow-capped peak dominates the horizon. Before descending, a walk through the surreal Rock Forest — ancient stone spires sculpted by millennia of wind — provides the most otherworldly photo moments of any Cusco trek. A traditional Andean lunch awaits before your return to Cusco.

ESPAÑOL — Un Día de Colores, Silencio y Cielo Abierto

Su aventura comienza con el recojo temprano desde su hotel y un viaje panorámico por los Andes del sur de Cusco. La primera parada será Checacupe, donde podrá apreciar tres puentes de distintas épocas: inca, colonial y republicana.

Luego, continuará hacia las tierras altas andinas hasta llegar al poblado de Palccoyo, punto de inicio de una caminata suave y accesible. En aproximadamente 50 minutos, disfrutará de una vista única de tres montañas de colores al mismo tiempo.

A 4,900 m de altitud, el imponente nevado Ausangate domina el paisaje. Antes de regresar, explorará el fascinante Bosque de Piedras, una formación natural de impresionantes columnas rocosas moldeadas por el paso del tiempo. Finalmente, disfrutará de un almuerzo tradicional andino antes de retornar a Cusco.
